Welcome to Artizan

Clayton,

Sometimes one's attempt to provide personalized service and communication hit a technological brick wall. This happened to me with our first email announcement to our customers!

It's probably no surprise that communicating with a large group of people is done through mass email, however personalized you try to make it. Sadly, our very first email suffered a lack of the very thing we want - personalization. For that Clayton, please accept my apologies.

I hope you'll attend our drop-in, and look forward to seeing you on October 22.
